USSR, USA and Great Britain. During the Conference in the palace there was the residence of F. Roosevelt, the president of USA.

Livadiya park that is the oldest on the Crimea Coast was started in 1830s by Delinger, famous gardener. It beautifully combines exotic plants with local oaks and cedars. Lawns and flower beds, arbors, marble benches, elegant fountains and breast-walls adorn the park.

The famous Tzar path starts from Livadiya palace. It was built in 1860s for walks of members of the tzar family. The Tzar path is laid almost horizontally, without drops, sharp hills and slopes. It is comfortable along all the way, decorated the sculptures, rare exotic trees and bushes, and original benches to have a rest. Everyone can walk along the path even if you have heart diseases.

South-west slope is thought to be the saint place for local people - there is the spring of St. George 100 meters under the top, pilgrims come there to cure wounds and diseases. And under the mountain, in mountain area Achiklar there are the ruins of the temple of St. George, in the walls and basements of which the slabs of the ancient pagan temple of goddess Demeter were found. That confirms that this place is saint since the ancient times.

The path takes us through the forest of oaks and horn-beech. There are pines here also. From the top of the mountain you can admire round panoramic view: on the east spread before the eyes there is Kapselskaya valley and Meganom massive locking it; on the north - the rows of mountains of the Main rage run away, mountains of Novy Svet and line of South Coast of the Crimea are visible. The Geography of the 20th Anniversary International Conference “Crimea 2013”

The Crimean Peninsula, located almost midway between the Equator and the North Pole, resembles a green grape leaf thrown over the sea. Relatively low Crimean Mountains run along the sea for almost 180 km, protecting the coast from cold northern winds and maintaining the subtropical climate on the peninsula.

Crimea is famous for its wonderful resorts, delicious wines and historic memorials. The fates of many tribes and peoples intersected on this land.

The places of interest in Crimea is the Crimea itself.

SUDAK

Sudak – the main Conference venue – welcomes the Conference for the 17-th time already.

Sudak was known as Sugdeya to the ancient Greeks, Soldaya to the Genoese, and Surozh to the ancient Russians. The town grew up on the coast of conveniently located harbor, which was the focal point of the land routes from Eastern Europe and Asia. From the very start it was an important junction for the Black Sea navigation.

Sudak is located in the southern part of Sudak Valley on the coast of the Sudak Bay of the Black Sea.

Sudak Valley is very picturesque and rich. It is the most extensive valley in southeastern Crimea. The Suuk-Su (Cold Water) river runs through the valley. The valley is surrounded by high mountains with bizarre peaks. They protect the valley from cold winds, while cool afternoon breezes soften the heat of the sun. The abundance of the verdure makes the valley most picturesque.
The traces of human beings in the Sudak region go back to the Paleolithic age (80-30 thousand years BC). The Taures lived here in the first millennium BC and the first centuries AD. Historical sources consider 212 AD as the year of the town foundation. The foundation of the town and its name Sugdeya are linked to Alans (ancestors of modern Ossetians).

In VIII and IX centuries Sugdeya was the administrative center of the Khazars, the then owners of the Crimea. The Khazars were succeeded by Pechenegs, and those by the Polovtces. Over the XI-XIII centuries Sugdeya flourished as an international center. Merchants from Russia, Western Europe, Northern Africa, China, and India had their business here. Later on the Venetians arrived and built their trading stations and fortresses here. Sudak- Soldaya was the biggest fortress. A wealthy town attracted conquerors. It suffered numerous assaults by Turks and Mongols, which resulted in the town’s decay. It lost its significance. The Genoese captured the town in XIV century. They restored its defense system, but despite that the Turks conquered the town. Under the Turkic domination the town lost its significance as well.

In XIX century Crimea was allotted into the Russian Empire. A new stage of Sudak development started at that time. Vineyards and fruit gardens were planted and new buildings were constructed. From late XIX century on Sudak is known as a Black Sea resort.

The Civil War and World War II didn’t skirt Sudak. Each time the town was rebuilt and kept living...

The main street in Sudak, the Lenin Street, goes past the “Sudak” Tourist and Health Center. Right after the Center the Sugar Head rock overlooks the road. Right behind the rock the impressive ruins of the Sudak fortress can be seen. The Fortress is one of the major and impressive historical sites of the Crimean Peninsula. Its two-tier defense constructions still look inaccessible. The constructions of various times (walls, towers, temples, and casemates) keep the memory of various peoples, Greeks, Armenians, Khazars, Turks, Italians, and Russians...

The oldest memorial of the Russian period in Sudak is the church of the early XIX century. The first local hospital building and Tatar neighborhood of the old town have survived all cataclysms as well. Low houses with tile roofs go up the hill.

Modern Sudak is a center of viticulture and winemaking. Seven big vineyards produce about 20,000 tons of high-grade grapes annually for the original dessert wines. The ether-oil species, such as rose, lavender and sage are also planted in the Valley. The product of local ether-oil factory is partially exported to foreign companies.
BAKHCHISARAI

Bakhchisaray is a Crimean town and regional center. Its history dates back into the late 15-th, when the Crimean dynasty of the Crimean Khans Girays reigned. Initially, Khan’s residence was situated on the plato of Chufut-Kale but later, due to political reasons, it moved to the mountain bottom, into the valley of the Churuk-Su (“stale water”) River where Bakhchisaray was found. In the Turkic language “Bakhchisaray” means “a palace in the gardens”. Under the reign of Khan Mengly-Girey, the town became the capital of the Crimean Khanate and played its role till 1783. The main tourist attractions of Bakhchisaray are the Khan’s Palace built in the early 16-th century by Khan Abdul-Sakhal Girey, and the famous “Fountain of Tears” built by Iranian master Omer by will of Khan Qirim-Girey to memorize his beloved wife Dilara-Bikech who had died in 1764. The Fountain was praised by Alexander Pushkin in his poem “The Fountain of Bakhchisaray”. Today the Palace is a historical and architectural museum.

Chufut-Kale (“The Jewish (or Karaim) Fortress”), Orthodox Assumption cave monastery – a record of the Russian presence in the medieval Crimea, Tatar town and the Palace make Bakhchisaray at the same time a Jewish, Christian Orthodox, and Muslim town.

Nowhere in the Crimea but in ancient and modern Bakhchisaray and its surroundings you will feel the flavor of the Medieval Age walking along its narrow winding streets and modern multi-storey buildings. Its rich history and monuments attract many thousands of tourists.
SIMFEROPOL

Simpheropolis means “a city of benefit and a gatherer” and its coat of arms carries a hive with honeybees and an inscription “Poleznoye” (literally, “Beneficial”). Simferopol is located in the center of the Crimean Peninsula and accumulates everything the peninsula is famous for. The city is the capital of Crimean Autonomous Republic administrative, economic, and cultural center.

The city's locality has a long and rich history. From the 3d century BC to the 4th century AD, Neapolis, the capital of the Scythian state, was located on the plateau south from the today's city center. This was a vital place in the times of the Crimean khanate and, for some time, the residence of Kalgi Sultan, the second person in the khanate.

Today, Simferopol cannot boast of many architectural sites, but some buildings are worthy of attention: Kebir-Jami Mosque, the city's oldest building of 1508; Vorontsov’s House in the Salgirka park; the former male regional gymnasium; the former hospice; Franko Republican Universal Scientific Library which was built in 1826 for the Gentility Assembly and during the Crimean War gave its premises to the hospital where the famous surgeon N. I. Pirogov worked; the nearby Gorky Russian Drama Theater which was erected in 1911 after the plans of an eminent architect A. N. Beketov.
