What Do We Mean by Book Quality?

Marina Ishkova, «EKSMO» Publishing House, Moscow, Russia

The proposed subject scope is as follows:

What does book mean for today? What is a QUALITY BOOK? Who needs it and why: Is it a private affair, or a matter of the nation's intellectual potential? Which books are considered useful, and which – harmful, and who has a right to 'consider' them as such? What changes in books quality are expected in the recession economy? Will it improve at the background of keen fight for readers' attention, or deteriorate due to uncontrolled sloven workmanship? The main question is: who is in charge of preventing the latter scenario, and how?

Representatives of the book industry, librarianship, public and political figures, authors, professors, journalists, and every reader who is interested, are invited for a discussion.

The Round Table goal is to generate criteria for quality and offgrade books which are to form the core of the activities of every book market player and to enable to improve the quality of book products, in particular, those offered by the Russian Book Union.

Records of Wallenburg's fate, like those of the Katyn massacre, were hidden for decades, but he has remained a hero of resistance among Jews and is one of only three persons ever to be voted an honorary citizen of Canada, along with Nelson Mandela and the Dalai Lama. To attention of the visitors are the ruins of the ancient Greek temple, pithos, amphoras, a crook with a system of natural waterbeds, a rotunda, pergola, the walls of the medieval fortress, a fountain, arcs, a waterfall, Italian, Japanese and Mexican landscape gardens, live sculptures and many other most beautiful things.

Upon leaving the park the group will go to a most magnificent architectural site of the Southern Coast of Crimea – the Massandra Palace of Tsar Alexander III. Built in the 19th century as per the design of Mesmakher in the French castle style of Louis the Thirteenth, the Palace is situated in a remote place on the mountain slope and is surrounded by a park. The Palace strikes not only by its unique architecture and luxurious inner decoration, but also by a harmonious combination with the nature. Formerly a governmental residence, it is now a museum of architecture and art with a permanent exhibition «The Family of Tsar Alexander III».

We suggest going down to the Embankment of Yalta, the capital of the Southern Coast of Crimea, by a cableway which runs from Darsan Hill (110 m above sea level). From the top of this Hill you will surely admire the panorama of Yalta and its surroundings.

This tour is a rare chance to discover the beauty of the palaces and parks of Crimea!

The Geography of the Sixteenth International Conference “Crimea 2009”

The Crimean Peninsula, located almost midway between the Equator and the North Pole, resembles a green grape leaf thrown over the sea. Relatively low Crimean Mountains run along the sea for almost 180 km, protecting the coast from cold northern winds and maintaining the subtropical climate on the peninsula.

Crimea is proud famous for its wonderful resorts, delicious wines and historic memorials. The fates of many tribes and peoples intersected on this land.

The places of interest in Crimea is the Crimea itself.

SUDAK

Sudak – the main Conference venue – welcomes the Conference for the 13-th time already.

Sudak was known as Sugdeya to the ancient Greeks, Soldaya to the Genoese, and Surozh to the ancient Russians. The town grew up on the coast of conveniently located harbor, which was the focal point of the land routes from Eastern Europe and Asia. From the very start it was an important junction for the Black Sea navigation.

Sudak is located in the southern part of Sudak Valley on the coast of the Sudak Bay of the Black Sea.

Sudak Valley is very picturesque and rich. It is the most extensive valley in southeastern Crimea. Suuk-Su (Cold Water) river runs through the valley. The valley is surrounded by high mountains with bizarre peaks. They protect the valley from cold winds, while cool afternoon breezes soften the heat of the sun. The abundance of the verdure makes the valley most picturesque.

The traces of human beings in the Sudak region go back to the Paleolithic age (80-30 thousand years BC). The Taures lived here in the first millennium BC and the first centuries AD. Historical sources consider 212 AD as the year of the town foundation. The foundation of the town and its name Sugdeya are linked to Alans (ancestors of modern Ossetians).

In VIII and IX centuries Sugdeya was the administrative center of the Khazars, the then owners of the Crimea. The Khazars were succeeded by Pechenegs, and those by the Polovtses. Over the XI-XIII centuries Sugdeya flourished as an international center. Merchants from Russia, Western Europe, Northern Africa, China, and India had their business here. Later on the Venetians arrived and built their trading stations and fortresses here. Sudak- Soldaya was the biggest fortress. A wealthy town attracted conquerors. It suffered numerous assaults by Turks and Mongols, which resulted to the town's decay. It lost its significance. The Genoese captured the town in XIV century. They restored its defense system, but despite that the Turks conquered the town. Under the Turks domination the town lost its significance as well.

In XIX century Crimea was allotted into the Russian Empire. A new stage of Sudak development started at that time. Vineyards and fruit gardens were planted and new buildings were constructed. From late XIX century on Sudak is known as a Black Sea resort.

The Civil War and World War II didn't skirt Sudak. Each time the town was rebuilt and kept living...

The main street in Sudak, the Lenin Street, goes past the "Sudak" Tourist and Health Center. Right after the Center the Sugar Head rock overlooks the road. Right behind the rock the impressive ruins of the Sudak fortress can be seen. The Fortress is one of the major and impressive historical sites of the Crimean Peninsula. Its two-tier defense constructions still look inaccessible. The constructions of various times (walls, towers, temples, and casemates) keep the memory on various peoples, Greeks, Armenians, Khazars, Turks, Italians, and Russians...

The oldest memorial of the Russian period in Sudak is the church of the early XIX century. The first local hospital building and Tatar neighborhood of the old town have survived all cataclysms as well. Low houses with tile roofs go up the hill.

Modern Sudak is a center of viticulture and winemaking. Seven big vineyards produce about 20,000 tons of high-grade grapes annually for the original dessert wines. The ether-oil species, such as rose, lavender and sage are planted in the Valley. The product of Production local ether-oil factory is partially exported to foreign companies.

KOKTEBEL

Koktebel... This word is of Turkic origin (Kok-Tope-El stands for the Land of Blue Peaks). The best known of them is Karadag (Black Mountain), the oldest volcano in our country and a single (on the CIS European territory) volcano of Jurassic period, which preserved the lineaments of its origin.

Valleys around Karadag were inhabited from long time ago. In the early I century BC the legendary Cimmerians, the most ancient Crimean peoples, lived here. In medieval times Koktebel was inhabited by local breeds, the descendants of Taures and Skythians assimilated with the nationalities from Bosphorus – Greeks, Sarmats and Alans. In X century the colony was destroyed by the Pechenegs. The life there recovered only 2-3 centuries afterwards. A Tatar village was founded in the place of present Koktebel. In early XIX century the colonists from Bulgaria settled here. Almost up to the end of XIX century Koktebel was a tiny colony linked with Feodosiya by bad dirty road.

Professor-oculist Z. A. Yunge was the founder of local resort. He purchased the land in Koktebel valley with intention to transform it into a prosperous resort, but his money was insufficient. This forced him to sell the land by small lots. This is the way the first country-houses (dachas) appeared here in early XX century. Poet and artist M. Voloshin built his house here in 1903. Gradually the house became some kind of vacation house. A lot of outstanding people, such as M. Gorky, A. Tolstoy, V. Brusov, V. Veresaev, M. Tsvetaeva, O. Mandelshtam, K. Trenev, M. Bulgakov and many others visited it in different time.

M. Voloshin donated his house to the Writers Union. Later the Koktebel House of Creative Work was formed there. The poet's home is the museum of literature and arts at present.

M. Voloshin died August 11, 1932. According to the poet's last will, he was buried on the peak of Kuchuk-Enishar mountain bed.

Koktebel is deservedly called the motherland of domestic gliding. Here the future academician, the chief constructor of space vehicles S. P. Korolev raised his gliders Krasnaya Zvezda (Red Star) and Koktebel for the first time. Famous airplane constructors S. V. Ilyshin, O. K. Antonov and A. S. Yakovlev started their way to big aviation from gliding here. The museum of gliding was opened on the premises of Priboy (Surf) Resort Center.

SIMFEROPOL

Simpheropolis means “a city of benefit and a gatherer” and its coat of arms carries a hive with honeybees and an inscription “Poleznoye” (literally, “Beneficial”). Simferopol is located in the center of the Crimean Peninsula and accumulates everything the peninsula is famous for. The city is administrative, economic, and cultural center of the Crimean Autonomous Republic.

The city’s locality has a long and rich history. From the 3d century BC to the 4th century AD, Neapolis, the capital of the Scythian state, was located on the plateau south from the today’s city center. This was a vital place in the times of the Crimean khanate and, for some time, the residence of Kalgi Sultan, the second person in the khanate.

Today, Simferopol cannot boast of architectural sites but some buildings are worthy of attention: Kebir-Jami Mosque, the city’s oldest building of 1508; Vorontsov’s House in the park Salgirka; the former male regional gymnasium; the former hospice; Franko Republican Universal Scientific Library which was built in 1826 for the Gentility Assembly and gave its premises during the Crimean War to the hospital where the famous surgeon N. I. Pirogov worked; the nearby Gorky Russian Drama Theater which was erected in 1911 after the plans of an eminent architect A. N. Beketov.

FEODOSIA

Feodosia is one of the oldest towns in Europe. It is over 2,500 years old. Ellins settled here long Before Christ. They founded the town and called it Feodosia (God-given). Ancient Feodosia was famous for its harbor and sea-port as well as rich fields.

Later the town was allotted into the Bosphorus State. In the IV century BC it was destroyed by the Huns. In medieval times the town was known as Kaffa. The Genoese ruled the town for two centuries and made it the administrative and trade center of their Crimean provinces. Fortifications defending from Tatar were built around the town. Their remains survived up to date. In the XV century Kaffa was conquered by the Ottoman Turks and became the center the Turkish Sultan Crimean province and the main slave market.

During the Russian-Turkish War the town was taken by Russians. The initial name Feodosia was returned to the town. During the World War II the front line passed through Feodosia four times.

The town has lost its ancient image. It was destroyed too much times in its ancient and modern history, but medieval street planning survived in one of the neighborhoods.

Many places in Feodosia are associated with famous individuals. The great artist I. Aivazovsky was born and spent the great deal of his life here. Poet M. Voloshin and writer A. Grin lived in Feodosia as well.
